

Tip #14 Using the COPM in an Interprofessional Team

Although originally developed for occupational therapists, the COPM can be used by any team member—as long as the issues identified are occupation-focused and all team members should receive appropriate education and training (see Learning module: <https://www.thecopm.ca/learning-module/>).

The client-centred focus of the COPM helps ensure the whole team is working on what is most meaningful and important to the client.

The COPM provides a common way for the different professions to measure and track progress on performance of occupations in a shared language.
